

Forrest Miller

I connect with the sacred through relationships – with self, with others, with nature, with ideas. In college, I studied philosophy and religion, then went on to earn a master's of divinity from Lancaster Seminary. I have experience in non-profits, working in mental health and with formerly incarcerated persons. I completed the Wellstreams program for spiritual formation and the art of spiritual direction in May 2023.

My hobbies include woodworking, gardening, singing, and enjoying time with family, my partner, Dawn, and our kitties.

I am excited to support the Spirituality Network as a board member because our communities need the values it practices: that all are affirmed as they are, that showing up is both a gift and a practice, that diversity of conviction is not reason for division, but an opportunity for greater understanding.
